ABOUT

Alloverstreet: East Oliver Street Art Walk is a monthly night of simultaneous art openings and events spanning the many diverse art spaces in Station North. Alloverstreet hosts hundreds of visitors for free performances and exhibitions on the first Friday of every month, from 5:00 - 10:00PM on the 300 & 400 blocks of East Oliver Street and surrounding area in Station North. Alloverstreet evolved organically out of Process Collectives on-going practice in late 2013 and was born out of an intention to create more accessible and inclusive artistic happenings at artist-run venues at the Copycat. Directed by Kimi Mauer and Lee Heinemann for its first two years, Alloverstreet is now supported and administered by Station North Arts & Entertainment, Inc.

Alloverstreet's structure is based on two significant values:

- 1) Alloverstreet is democratically curated: this means that any art space, collective or individual who wishes to be involved is welcome and that we actively work to broaden participation in the project.
- 2) Alloverstreet is collectively run: this means that participating spaces collectively control the development and overall direction of the project.

This rhizomatic structure, in which no one entity may entirely control the direction of the project, has developed through years of dialogical-democratic engagement between consistent participants and continues through monthly project meetings. Alloverstreet attempts to unite different audiences and works to broaden the scope and reach of independently run art spaces.
